Kingston Primary Expansion Strategy

Proposals to expand school places in the Surbiton area are set within the context of changes in demand for school places across Kingston and at a local and national level. Since 2008, the Royal Borough of Kingston has faced unprecedented demand for school places in its primary schools. The borough has had to respond to make additional places available for Reception Year (Year R / first year of Primary/Infant School at age 4) classes onwards. These places were added on a temporary basis in order to ensure that sufficient places were available for all resident children who required a place. This strategy details how Kingston will permanently provide an additional 13.5 Forms of Entry (405 places) in Reception from September 2011 onwards to meet the expected future demand for places.

In September 2008, an additional 7 Forms of Entry (210 places) were added to Kingston Primary Schools to provide extra places in the form of additional (bulge) classes to deal with increased demand for a primary school place. This was followed by an additional 10 Forms of Entry (300 places) in 2009 and a further 10 Forms of Entry in 2010 (300 places). This was always recognised as a temporary solution largely through the use of temporary accommodation on various school sites, and did not permanently change the Published Admission Number.

These proposals to expand existing primary school places in the Surbiton area by 1.5 Forms of Entry, along with others outlined below, form the Local Authority's plan to provide permanently an additional 13.5 Forms of Entry (405 places). This permanent expansion will provide a total of 1,980 places to meet expected demand with a reasonable level of extra places to provide for a degree of parental preference and places for families moving into the area. In producing its strategy the Local Authority has taken into account a number of factors including; popularity of schools, suitability of site for expansion, geographical location and balance of community/ Voluntary Aided school places. It should be noted that many pupils attend a school in a different school planning area to the one in which they live.

Why are more Primary school places needed?

As outlined on the opposite page, temporary increases in the number of primary school places have been necessary since 2008 to provide sufficient capacity within Kingston primary schools. The permanent capacity of 1575 places has proved inadequate for a number of reasons, including: -

- The birth rate has risen by 23% between 2002/03 and 2007/08 – single biggest factor
- An increasing proportion of resident children applying for a Kingston Primary School place of the corresponding years' number of live births (increased from approximately 80% - 90%)
- Kingston Primary Schools are popular and high achieving driving up demand for places, many from those outside of the Borough
- New housing developments including increasing numbers of school aged children living in smaller dwellings particularly flats
- Reduced demand for independent sector school places due to the performance of the economy
- Changes in the housing market resulting in fewer families moving away from Kingston

 Revised forecasts incorporating latest population data will be available shortly and whilst confirming a sustained high birth rate are expected to reduce the reception pupils forecast for 2012/12–2014/15 creating some additional surplus capacity

Proposals for the Surbiton Area

The number of places per year group in Surbiton Area primary schools is currently 405 (13.5 Forms of Entry). The number of places is proposed to increase to 510 (17 Forms of Entry) from September 2011. This would be achieved by expanding Grand Avenue Primary by one form of entry (30 places), St Matthew's Primary by half a form of entry (15 places) and opening a new school on part of the Surbiton Hospital site (60 places). All of these additional places are required to ensure there is sufficient capacity in the area.

Grand Avenue Primary School

The school is currently a two form entry primary school with 60 places per year group and capacity overall for 420 pupils. It is proposed that the school is expanded to become a three form entry primary school with capacity for 630 pupils.

The proposed expansion of school places would involve the addition of classrooms and other accommodation to ensure sufficient accommodation for the increased number of pupils. This will be achieved through a mix of new build and adaptations to existing accommodation.

St Matthew's Church of England Primary School

The school is currently a one and a half form entry primary school with 45 places per year group and capacity overall for 315 pupils. It is proposed that the school is expanded to become a two form entry primary school with capacity for 420 pupils.

The proposed expansion would involve the addition of a number of new classrooms along with remodelling of existing accommodation.

New Surbiton Primary School

It is proposed to open a new primary school in Surbiton in September 2011 located on part of the Surbiton Hospital site. This would be a two form entry primary school providing 60 places per year group and capacity overall for 420 pupils. It would open to reception aged children only in September 2011.

Whilst part of the package of the proposals to provide 3.5 additional Forms of Entry in Surbiton, the proposal for the new school is subject to a separate consultation process as the Local Authority is required to carry out a competition process when establishing any new school. This consultation document has been widely circulated in the Surbiton area and can be obtained from www.kingston.gov.uk/school_expansion or telephoning by 020 8547 5251.

School Size and School Effectiveness

Kingston has a well established reputation for high quality education for children and young people and the Council intends to maintain and improve its schools. In order to inform its proposals, the Council has undertaken research into the relationship between primary school size and school effectiveness. This has found that there is no proven link between the size of school and quality of education. Rather, research shows that school leadership, ethos and quality of teaching and learning are the most important factors.

In Kingston we have a very high proportion of good and outstanding schools and they come in all sizes. Although our larger schools currently tend to have the strongest Ofsted judgements and academic results, we do not believe size to be the determining factor.

Planning and Design

Initial feasibility studies have been completed for each of the schools which are proposed for expansion. This has shown that there is the potential for each school to be expanded on its existing site, subject to detailed designs which will be the subject of separate statutory planning processes and consultation.

Detailed design proposals are currently being developed in partnership with each school and Diocesan authorities where appropriate. This is looking at how to provide the best possible design for new buildings and refurbishment of existing accommodation where appropriate whilst working within a limited overall budget. Each school's expanded accommodation will be fit for 21st Century education. Proposals will also need to take account of their relationship with and potential impact on their surrounding areas.

Designs will be available from May onwards and will be shared widely with the local community and current and prospective parents/carers through exhibitions and pre-planning application and statutory consultations.

Special Educational Needs

At the heart of the Local Authority's strategy for Special Educational Needs (SEN) is a vision that all Kingston Schools are inclusive and welcoming. There is existing specialist resourced provision (SRP) at a number of mainstream primary schools and we know that with an increasing demand for school places, the number of children with SEN is increasing. Our SEN strategy sets out our plan to establish more specialist support in schools and plans will be forthcoming to establish new provision in a number of primary schools across the Borough. There are no proposals to change the current SEN provision at either of the schools as a direct result of the proposal to increase their size.

Early Years Provision

There are no plans to increase the numbers of Nursery places within schools that are the subject of expansion. Additional places are being made available through new provision at the proposed new Surbiton Primary School, other schools and in the Private, Voluntary and Independent sector.

Promoting Sustainable Travel

A number of measures will be necessary to manage the impact of additional pupils on individual schools. During the planning application process the Local Authority will need to have demonstrated that an increase in the number of places at the schools will not have an adverse impact for existing pupils or the local community/transport network.

Additional places are required to provide sufficient places for children living within close proximity to schools subject to expansion. Many pupils will live within easy walking distance and measures such as School Travel Plans will have an important role to play in promoting sustainable travel (walking, cycling, public transport), reducing car use and minimising impact.

What happens next?

These consultations are amongst a number of related consultations taking place across the Borough to expand the number of places for entry to Reception Year in September 2011. All consultations for Kingston Town and Surbiton area schools (including establishing a new primary school) are taking place on the timetable outlined below. Consultations for schools in the Maldens and Coombe Area and South of the Borough will be taking place from 19 April – 1 June 2010 (see page 2 for details). Final decisions on all expansion proposals are expected to be made in September 2010.
